Supreme Court, U.S.
FILED

031123 FEB 2 - 2004

No. _____

In The

Supreme Court of the United States

JOSE ARMENDARIZ,

Petitioner,

v.

STATE OF TEXAS,

Respondent.

On Petition For A Writ Of Certiorari To The Texas Court Of Criminal Appeals

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI

THOMAS S. MORGAN
Attorney At Law
415 West Wall, Suite 209
Midland, Texas 79701
(432) 683-2703
(432) 684-7314 (Fax)
Attorney For Petitioner

COCKLE LAW BRIEF PRINTING CO. (800) 225-6964
OR CALL COLLECT (402) 342-2831

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether an officer, outside of his jurisdiction, has the authority to stop and detain a motorist when the officer making such stop did not personally observe the commission of a felony, breach of the peace, nor even a traffic violation, but merely heard over the police radio that some other officer observed a traffic violation outside the jurisdiction of the officer making such stop. This is a void in the law pertaining to criminal jurisprudence which needs resolution by this Honorable Court; and,

2. Whether a trial court abuses its discretion in believing a police officer, who claims a motorist gave consent to a search, when the videotape made of the entire episode at the scene clearly reveals no such consent being given, one officer claimed verbal consent from the motorist and another officer testified differently, claiming the motorist only gave consent by supposedly nodding his head, all in complete contradiction of the videotape admitted at the suppression hearing.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
Questions Presented	i
Opinion Below	1
Jurisdiction	1
Constitutional and Statutory Provisions Involved	1
Statement of Case	2
Reasons For Granting The Petition	6
First Question Presented	7
Second Question Presented	10
Conclusion	13
Appendix A – Opinion of Texas Court of Criminal Appeals	App. 1
Appendix B – Opinion of Texas Court of Appeals	App. 27
Appendix C – Constitutional and Statutory Provisions Involved	App. 38

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Page

CASES

Alldridge v. State, 850 S.W.2d 471 (Tex.Crim.App. 1993) 11

Bifulco v. United States, 447 U.S. 381, 100 S.Ct. 2247, 65 L.Ed.2d 205 (1980) 8

Florida v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491, 103 S.Ct. 1319, 75 L.Ed.2d 229 (1983) 8

Santosky v. Kramer, 455 U.S. 745, 122 S.Ct. 1388, 71 L.Ed.2d 599 (1982) 11, 12

Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 93 S.Ct. 2041, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973) 10

United States v. Chan-Jimenez, 125 F.3d 1324 (9 Cir. 1997) 12

United States v. Guapi, 144 F.3d 1393 (11 Cir. 1988) 11

United States v. Peters, 10 F.3d 1517 (10 Cir. 1993) 12

United States v. Werking, 915 F.2d 1404 (10 Cir. 1990) 10

Ward v. Texas, 316 U..S. 547, 62 S.Ct. 1139, 86 L.Ed. 1663 (1942) 7, 8

Whren v. United States, 517 U.S. 806, 116 S.Ct. 1769, 135 L.Ed.2d 89 (1996) 8

Wong Sun v. United States, 371 U.S. 471, 83 S.Ct. 407, 9 L.Ed.2d 441 (1963) 8

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES – Continued

Page

UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

Fourth Amendment 1, 8, 12

STATUTES

TEX.CODECRIM.PROC.ANN. Art. 14.03(d) (in effect on June 10, 1999) 2, 7, 9

Chapter 42, Texas Penal Code 2, 7, 9

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI

JOSE ARMENDARIZ, by and through his attorney of record, petitions for a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in this case.

OPINION BELOW

The opinion of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals is attached hereto as Appendix A. This opinion is being reported. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed a unanimous Court of Appeals, which decision is reported at 63 S.W.3d 572 and is attached hereto as Appendix B.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals was entered on December 10, 2003. No petition for rehearing was filed. Jurisdiction is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1257.

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

1. Fourth Amendment of the United States Constitution states as follows:

> The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, > and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

2. TEX.CODECRIM.PROC.ANN.Art. 14.03(d) states as follows:

> A peace officer who is outside his jurisdiction may arrest, without warrant, a person who commits an offense within the officer's presence or view, if the offense is a felony, a violation of Title 9, Chapter 42, Penal Code a breach of peace, or an offense under Section 49.02, Penal Code. A peace officer making an arrest under this subsection shall, as soon as practicable after making the arrest, notify a law enforcement agency having jurisdiction where the arrest was made. The law enforcement agency shall then take custody of the person committing the offense and take the person before a magistrate in compliance with Article 14.06 of this Code.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The facts necessary to place in their setting the questions now raised can be briefly stated:

Course of Proceedings and Disposition Below

The Petitioner was indicted for the felony offense of possession of cocaine in Ector County, Texas, such offense date being on or about June 10, 1999. Thereafter, the Petitioner filed a Motion to Suppress, which was heard on September 18, 2000. On September 19, 2000, the Petitioner agreed to a non-jury trial on both guilt/innocence and punishment. At the close of the proceeding, the trial court overruled the Petitioner's Motion to Suppress, found him guilty of a second degree felony offense of possession of cocaine, and sentenced him to five (5) years incarceration in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice - Institutional Division.

This case was timely appealed to the Texas Court of Appeals sitting in El Paso, Texas which, in a unanimous decision, reversed the trial court, holding that the Motion To Suppress should have been granted. A copy of the El Paso Court of Appeals opinion is attached hereto as Appendix C.

The State of Texas then filed a Petition for Discretionary Review with the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin, the highest Texas court in criminal cases and, in a 7 to 2 decision, reversed the El Paso Court of Appeals holding, and upheld the trial court's decision denying the Petitioner's Motion to Suppress and affirming the conviction.

Statement of Facts.

On June 10, 1999, the Odessa City Police Department received an anonymous tip that the Petitioner would be in possession of cocaine and heading to a location outside the Odessa city limits at the intersection of FM 1936 and West 42nd Street in Ector County.[1] The informant also told the officers that Petitioner would be in one of three vehicles, one of which was a green Lincoln, and the location of Petitioner's trailer.

---

[1] While the Odessa city police had been given Petitioner's name, they had no physical description of him beyond the fact that he was an Hispanic male.

In response to the tip, Odessa City Police Officer Jordan Medrano marshaled his staff and requested the help of Ector County Deputy Sheriff Keith Paquette in locating Petitioner's trailer. Paquette accompanied the Odessa city police to an area outside the Odessa city limits and helped Medrano locate Petitioner's trailer. Medrano then set up surveillance.

Medrano saw Petitioner get into a green Lincoln which matched the informant's information and drive away from the trailer. He radioed Paquette who then observed the Lincoln pass a vehicle on the right shoulder of the road while traveling northbound on FM 1936. Paquette radioed this information to Odessa City Police Officer Robert Doporto ("Doporto"). Doporto and Odessa City Police Officer Chris Aguilar ("Aguilar") then executed a police stop and search of the Lincoln, and ultimately Petitioner's arrest.

It is undisputed that the stop and search of the Lincoln and Petitioner's arrest took place outside the Odessa city limits, and that Deputy Paquette was the only law enforcement agent to see the alleged traffic violation that led to the stop. It is undisputed that prior to the stop of the Lincoln and the discovery of the cocaine in the door side pocket of the vehicle, no one other than Paquette saw Petitioner commit any violations of the law. It is undisputed that Paquette was not involved in the stop, search, or arrest. In fact, by the time Paquette arrived at the scene of the stop, Petitioner's vehicle had already been searched, cocaine discovered in the vehicle, and Petitioner placed under arrest. Paquette testified that he could not make the stop himself because he was in an unmarked, undercover police vehicle.

Aguilar was present from the inception of the stop, search, and arrest till its completion. At the suppression hearing, Aguilar testified he heard Petitioner consent to the search of the Lincoln in Spanish although the videotape of the stop does not reflect such oral consent. Aguilar later testified at trial that Petitioner gave his consent solely by nodding his head and that Aguilar was not close enough to hear Petitioner say anything. The videotape does, however, show that Aguilar was within hearing distance at the point at which Petitioner could have given verbal consent to a search.

Aguilar further testified that Petitioner gave his consent to Doporto. At the suppression hearing, Doporto testified he could not hear Petitioner giving consent to the search but that Petitioner had nodded his consent. At trial he testified that Petitioner nodded his head "yes" and said, "Yes, I consent to the search." Doporto also maintained at trial that he could hear Petitioner consenting to the search on the videotape even though he admitted he was changing his testimony from that given at the suppression hearing.

Petitioner testified he did not consent to the search of the Lincoln. The defense also offered the testimony of the court-appointed interpreter who listened to the tape at least ten times in an attempt to determine whether oral consent was given. The interpreter testified she could not hear the officers ask Petitioner for permission to search the Lincoln, nor hear Petitioner give consent to such a search.

Odessa City Police Officer Lt. Vic Sikes testified he conducted and controlled the entire Petitioner investigation, stop, and arrest on behalf of the Odessa city police.

There were no supervisors from the County Sheriff's Office present. It was undisputed that Petitioner was not turned over to the Ector County Sheriff's Department following his arrest. Odessa city police were also responsible for booking Petitioner at the Ector County detention center.[2]

REASONS FOR GRANTING PETITION

This case presents important questions concerning (1) whether an officer, outside of his jurisdiction, has the authority to stop and detain a motorist when the officer who makes such stop did not personally observe the commission of a felony, breach of the peace, drunken driving, nor even a traffic violation, but merely heard over the police radio that some other officer observed a traffic violation outside the jurisdiction of the officer making such stop. This is a void in the law pertaining to criminal jurisprudence which needs resolution by this Honorable Court; and, (2) whether a trial court abuses its discretion in believing a police officer who claims a motorist gave consent to a search, when the videotape made of the entire episode at the scene clearly reveals no such consent being given, one officer claimed verbal consent from the motorist while another officer testified differently, claiming the motorist gave consent only by supposedly nodding his head, all in complete contradiction of the videotape admitted at the suppression hearing.

[2] How much time actually elapsed from the time of the stop till the time of booking is not clear. What is clear is that the Odessa city police kept Petitioner in their custody through a search of his residence before he was transported to the Ector County Detention Center.

As to the First Question Presented, the stop of Petitioner and his vehicle, by an officer clearly outside of his jurisdiction, is unlawful, especially considering such officer saw only lawful conduct of the Petitioner, including viewing no felonies; no breach of the peace; no drunken driving; no unlawful conduct; and, did not see any traffic violation.[3] Indeed, even if an officer observes a traffic violation, such officer apparently has no right to stop a motorist outside his jurisdiction because a minor traffic infraction such as speeding, is not a felony and can hardly be considered a breach of the peace.

The United States Supreme Court has held that a peace officer is restricted to his jurisdiction to enforce the law. Ward v. Texas, 316 U.S. 547, 62 S.Ct. 1139, 86 L.Ed. 1663 (1942). Indeed, this Honorable Court held that the sheriff of Morris County, Texas had no jurisdiction nor authority to arrest someone in Titus County, Texas. Ward v. Texas, supra.

---

[3] TEX.CODECRIM.PROC.ANN. ART. 14.03(d), in effect on June 10, 1999, was as follows: "A peace officer who is outside his jurisdiction may arrest, without warrant, a person who commits an offense within the officer's presence or view, if the offense is a felony, a violation of Title 9, Chapter 42, Penal Code a breach of peace, or an offense under Section 49.02, Penal Code. A peace officer making an arrest under this subsection shall, as soon as practicable after making the arrest, notify a law enforcement agency having jurisdiction where the arrest was made. The law enforcement agency shall then take custody of the person committing the offense and take the person before a magistrate in compliance with Article 14.06 of this Code."

The Fourth Amendment protects against unreasonable searches and seizures and, when an officer pulls over a motorist and begins questioning such motorist, a "seizure" under the Fourth Amendment has occurred. Whren v. United States, 517 U.S. 806, 116 S.Ct. 1769, 135 L.Ed.2d 89 (1996).

If a defendant is illegally seized, then the consent given by such defendant is tainted by the illegality. Florida v. Royer, 460 U.S. 491, 103 S.Ct. 1319, 75 L.Ed.2d 229 (1983). Moreover, there cannot be a purging of the primary taint, since the request for the Petitioner to give consent to a search of his vehicle was immediately made upon the unlawful stopping of the Petitioner.

Accordingly, reason and common sense dictate that the Fourth Amendment requires an officer, outside his jurisdiction and causing a motorist to pull over and stop, must actually observe commission of a crime or breach of the peace to have a valid stop, and officer Aguilar had no more authority to stop the Petitioner than the sheriff of Morris County, Texas had in arresting the defendant in Titus County, Texas, in the United States Supreme Court case of Ward v. Texas, supra.

Because the Petitioner was unlawfully stopped and a seizure of the Petitioner took place, Officer Aguilar had no right to ask the Petitioner to consent to a search of Petitioner's automobile, as such search constitutes "fruit of the poisonous tree." Wong Sun v. United States, 371 U.S. 471, 83 S.Ct. 407, 9 L.Ed.2d 441 (1963).

This Honorable Court has held that, if there is any ambiguity as to how a statute should be interpreted, such statute must be resolved in favor of the accused. Bifulco v. United States, 447 U.S. 381, 100 S.Ct. 2247, 65 L.Ed.2d 205 (1980). The statute in question is TEX.CODE CRIM.PROC.ANN ART. 14.03(d) which is quoted in Footnote 3.[4] The Texas statute does not permit an officer to stop someone outside his jurisdiction, including a motorist, unless such officer personally observes someone commit a felony, drunk driving, an offense under Chapter 42 of the Texas Penal Code entitled "Disorderly Conduct and Related Offenses," or a breach of the peace in his presence. The statute does not state that a minor traffic infraction constitutes a "breach of the peace", nor does Article 14.03(d) permit an officer to stop someone, for a minor traffic infraction, outside his jurisdiction because another officer purportedly saw another minor traffic infraction, and any ambiguity must be resolved in favor of the Petitioner, since officer Aguilar did not personally observe a felony, drunk driving, an offense under Chapter 42 of the Texas Penal Code, breach of the peace, nor even a minor traffic infraction. Logic dictates that the Fourth Amendment should go no further, with regard to an officer outside his jurisdiction stopping a motorist, than what TEX.CODECRIM.PROC.ANN. ART. 14.03(d) allows.

Consequently, because the Petitioner was "seized" within the Fourth Amendment by an officer who was clearly outside of his jurisdiction and saw no crime, traffic infraction nor breach of the peace, the Fourth Amendment rights of the Petitioner were violated. Accordingly, this Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be granted as to the First Question Presented.

---

[4] An offense under Section 49.02, Texas Penal Code, means "driving while intoxicated."

As to the Second Question Presented, the issue is whether the Petitioner voluntarily consented to the search of his automobile after being stopped for a minor traffic infraction.

As to the voluntariness of consent, the court must determine such voluntariness based on the totality of the circumstances. Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 93 S.Ct. 2041, 36 L.Ed.2d 854 (1973). Moreover, there are three requirements to sustain a finding of consent to a warrantless search: (1) there must be evidence that the consent was unequivocal, specific and freely and intelligently given; (2) the prosecution must prove that the consent was without duress or coercion; and, (3) there must be convincing evidence of consent, with every reasonable presumption made against a waiver of Fourth Amendment rights. United States v. Werking, 915 F.2d 1404 (10 Cir. 1990).

The evidence reveals the following after the Petitioner necessarily stopped his vehicle. Officer Aguilar asked the Petitioner to produce his driver's license; did not give Petitioner a traffic ticket; did not give Petitioner a traffic warning; promptly asked Petitioner if he would consent to a search of his motor vehicle; Officer Aguilar did not smell marijuana nor any other contraband; did not see any contraband in plain view; did not see any residue of a possible controlled substance; the Petitioner did not make any furtive gestures; was not nervous; Officer Aguilar never told the Petitioner he had the right to refuse to give consent; the Petitioner was never told he had the right to leave; no Miranda warning was given; it is apparent Officer Aguilar was armed; the Petitioner made no false statements; the Petitioner had no difficulty producing his driver's license; and, the Petitioner never signed any written consent form. Moreover, a videotape of the events transpiring at the scene was made, and the Petitioner never stated he was consenting to a search of his motor vehicle. Indeed, a Spanish speaking interpreter, who viewed the videotape and heard the audio portions of such videotape ten times, never heard the Petitioner, who speaks Spanish, state he was giving consent to a search of his car.[5] Not only does the videotape reveal the Petitioner never gave consent to a search of his automobile at all, but two officers contradicted each other, because one officer testified the Petitioner gave verbal consent to the search of his car, but another officer testified the Petitioner merely nodded his head, never giving verbal consent.

In Texas, the prosecution must prove an accused voluntarily consented to a search by "clear and convincing evidence." Alldridge v. State, 850 S.W.2d 471 (Tex.Crim.App. 1993). And, this Honorable Court has defined clear and convincing evidence as "that measure or degree of proof which will produce in the mind of the trier of fact a firm belief or conviction as to the truth of the allegations sought to be established." Santosky v. Kramer, 455 U.S. 745, 122 S.Ct. 1388, 71 L.Ed.2d 599 (1982).

An accused who was not advised he had the right to refuse to give consent alone has been held to be of utmost importance. United States v. Guapi, 144 F.3d 1393 (11 Cir. 1988).

---

[5] The original videotape was admitted into evidence and can be forwarded to this Honorable Court for viewing.

Moreover, an officer who fails to give a motorist the Miranda warning, stopped for a minor traffic infraction, is very important with regard to the voluntariness of consent. United States v. Chan-Jimenez, 125 F.3d 1324 (9 Cir. 1997). Indeed, consent obtained just moments after an illegal stop, with no Miranda warning given, constitutes a product of the illegal stop and should be suppressed. United States v. Peters, 10 F.3d 1517 (10 Cir. 1993).

When viewing the totality of the evidence, the trial court clearly did abuse its discretion in finding that the prosecution established voluntary consent by clear and convincing evidence, as defined by this Honorable Court in Santusky v. Kramer, especially based on the facts and evidence set forth above and the videotape revealing no consent whatsoever was given, also considering that every reasonable presumption is made against the waiver of Fourth Amendment rights.

Therefore, this Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be granted as to the Second Question Presented.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated, this Honorable Court should summarily reverse the decision of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals. That decision was patently erroneous, the conviction should be set aside, an order should be entered granting Petitioner's Motion To Suppress, and this Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

THOMAS S. MORGAN
415 West Wall
Suite 209
Midland, Tx 79701
Tel.: (432) 683-2703
Fax: (432) 684-7314

THOMAS S. MORGAN
State Bar No. 14452500
Attorney for Petitioner

APPENDIX A

[SEAL]

IN THE COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS OF TEXAS

No. 0070-02

JOSE FRANCO ARMENDARIZ, Appellant

v.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

ON THE STATE'S PETITION FOR DISCRETIONARY REVIEW FROM THE EIGHTH COURT OF APPEALS ECTOR COUNTY

Holcomb, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which Keller, P.J., and Price, Womack, Keasler, Hervey, and Cochran, JJ., joined. Womack, J., also filed a concurring opinion. Meyers, J., filed a dissenting opinion, in which Johnson, J., joined.

OPINION

The court of appeals held that the trial court erred in denying appellant's motion to suppress. Armendariz v. State, 63 S.W.3d 572, 578 (Tex.App. – El Paso 2001). We reverse.

The Relevant Facts

An Ector County grand jury indicted appellant on one count of possession of a controlled substance, namely cocaine. See Tex. Health & Safety Code § 481.115(d). Appellant later filed a motion to suppress the cocaine in question, and the trial court held an evidentiary hearing on the motion. The evidence adduced at the hearing, viewed in the light most favorable to the trial court's later ruling,[1] established the following:

On June 10, 1999, the Odessa Police Department received an anonymous tip that appellant would soon transport a quantity of cocaine from his residence on Witcher Street to the "La Bodega" convenience store on West 42nd Street. Both appellant's residence and the convenience store were located outside the Odessa city limits but inside Ector County. Odessa Police Officer Jordan Medrano asked Ector County Deputy Sheriff Keith Paquette to assist in the investigation of appellant, and Paquette agreed to do so. Medrano and Paquette, both undercover in civilian clothes and in unmarked vehicles, located appellant's residence, and Medrano began surveillance of it. Paquette remained in the area, in his unmarked vehicle, ready to assist. Several other Odessa police officers, in marked police vehicles, were also in the area, ready to assist. All of these peace officers maintained continuous radio contact. At approximately 4:30 p.m., Medrano observed appellant drive away from his residence in a green Lincoln automobile. Medrano radioed this information to the other police officers in the area and to Paquette. Moments later, Paquette spotted appellant's vehicle, followed it briefly, and observed appellant commit a traffic offense, namely passing on the shoulder. Since Paquette was undercover – and, therefore, not in a position to initiate a traffic stop of appellant – he radioed his observations to the Odessa police officers in the area and instructed them to stop appellant's vehicle. Two of the Odessa police officers then stopped appellant's vehicle at a point inside Ector County but outside the Odessa city limits. They asked for appellant's consent to search his vehicle, and he gave that consent voluntarily. The officers then searched appellant's vehicle and found two small bundles of cocaine. Paquette arrived at the scene a few minutes later.

[1] An appellate court reviewing a trial court's ruling on a motion to suppress must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the trial court's ruling. State v. Ross, 32 S.W.3d 853, 855 (Tex.Crim.App. 2000).

At the close of the evidence at the suppression hearing, appellant made two arguments as to why the cocaine in question should be suppressed. His first argument, grounded in the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution, was that the cocaine was the fruit of an unreasonable seizure and search conducted without probable cause.[2] His second argument, grounded in Article 14.03(d) of the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure,[3] was

---

[2] The Fourth Amendment's prohibition of unreasonable searches and seizures was made applicable to state officials by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Wolf v. Colorado, 338 U.S. 25, 27-28 (1949).

[3] Article 14.03(d) provides, in relevant part:

> A peace officer who is outside his jurisdiction may arrest, without warrant, a person who commits an offense within the officer's presence or view, if the offense is a felony, a violation of Title 9, Chapter 42, Penal Code [prohibiting

(Continued on following page)

that the cocaine was the fruit of an illegal traffic stop carried out outside the Odessa police officers' geographic jurisdiction.

The trial court rejected both of appellant's arguments and denied his motion to suppress. More specifically, the trial court concluded that the stop and search of appellant's vehicle were lawful under both the Fourth Amendment and state law because (1) at the time of the stop, the Odessa police officers had probable cause to believe that appellant was then committing the felony offense of possession of cocaine, (2) the officers obtained appellant's consent to search, and (3) the officers "had the participation by [the] sheriff's deputy outside the city limits."

Later, after a bench trial, the trial court found appellant guilty and assessed his punishment at imprisonment for five years and restitution in the amount of $140.

On direct appeal, appellant reiterated the two arguments he made in the trial court. The Eighth Court of Appeals accepted both of appellant's arguments, reversed the judgment of the trial court, and remanded the case for further proceedings. Armendariz v. State, 63 S.W.3d at 578. We later granted the State's petition for discretionary review to determine whether the court of appeals erred. See Tex. R. App. Proc. 66.3(b) & (c).

---

disorderly conduct], a breach of the peace, or an offense under Section 49.02, Penal Code [prohibiting public intoxication].

Analysis

The court of appeals was obligated to uphold the trial court's ruling on appellant's motion to suppress if that ruling was supported by the record and was correct under any theory of law applicable to the case. State v. Ross, 32 S.W.3d 853, 856 (Tex.Crim.App. 2000). That rule holds true even if the trial court gave the wrong reason for its ruling. Romero v. State, 800 S.W.2d 539, 543 (Tex.Crim.App. 1990). Our task, then, is to determine whether the trial court could have reasonably denied appellant's motion to suppress given the record evidence and given the applicable federal and state law.

We turn first to appellant's Fourth Amendment claim. As we noted previously, appellant argued in the trial court that the cocaine found in his vehicle should be suppressed, under the Fourth Amendment, as the fruit of an unreasonable seizure and search conducted without probable cause. Given the record evidence, however, the trial court could have reasonably concluded that the seizure and search of appellant's vehicle did not violate the Fourth Amendment. Once Deputy Sheriff Paquette observed appellant commit a traffic offense, he radioed that information to the Odessa police officers, and that information gave those officers probable cause to stop appellant's vehicle.[4] Once the officers stopped appellant's vehicle, they asked for and received his voluntary consent to search. Since the search followed a legitimate traffic stop and was carried out with appellant's consent, it was reasonable under the Fourth Amendment. See Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 219 (1973).

[4] Under the Fourth Amendment, probable cause to conduct a warrantless seizure exists when police have, at the moment of the seizure, knowledge of facts and circumstances grounded in reasonably trustworthy information and sufficient in themselves to warrant a belief by a prudent person that an offense has been or is being committed by the person seized. Beck v. Ohio, 379 U.S. 89, 91 (1964).

We turn next to appellant's state law claim. As we noted previously, appellant argued in the trial court that the cocaine should be suppressed, under Article 14.03(d), as the fruit of an illegal traffic stop carried out outside the Odessa police officers' geographic jurisdiction. Given the record evidence, however, the trial court could have reasonably concluded that the traffic stop did not violate state law. That is, the trial court could have reasonably concluded that the traffic stop was lawful under Article 14.01(b)[5] as interpreted by this Court in Astran v. State, 799 S.W.2d 761 (Tex.Crim.App. 1990).

In Astran, we faced a fact pattern analogous to the instant one:

> Dallas officers, uniformed and undercover, were working in a combined effort to arrest drug offenders on the date of [Romaldo Astran's] arrest. Officer Wilson was part of the team and was working undercover making street buys of illegal drugs. Wilson bought twenty dollars' worth of heroin from [Astran] and drove away from the scene of the sale. He immediately radioed uniformed Officer Black to make the arrest. Wilson gave a detailed description of [Astran], which > included [his] height, weight, and location. Wilson specifically told Black that [Astran] was wearing a tee-shirt which spelled the words "Jesus Christ." Black found appellant in two minutes and arrested him. Wilson was parked two blocks away during the arrest and maintained radio contact with Black throughout the sighting and arrest. Within thirty minutes of the arrest Wilson identified appellant at the police station as the person who sold the drugs. During the arrest, Black found a small matchbox with five capsules of heroin on [Astran's] person which [Astran] sought to have suppressed [as the fruit of an illegal arrest and search].

[5] Article 14.01(b) provides that "[a] peace officer may arrest an offender without a warrant for any offense committed in his presence or within his view."

Id. at 762. On those facts, we held that Astran's arrest was lawful under Article 14.01(b) because "Wilson's participation in and awareness of the circumstances of the arrest made him just as much a participant in [Astran's] arrest as if he had seized [Astran] himself." Id. at 764 (internal quotation marks omitted). In other words, Astran's arrest was lawful under Article 14.01(b) because Wilson himself, in effect, arrested Astran.

Given Article 14.01(b), as interpreted in Astran, and given the record evidence in this case, the trial court here could have reasonably concluded that appellant's arrest was lawful because Paquette himself, in effect, arrested appellant and Paquette was clearly acting within his geographic jurisdiction, which was Ector County. The record evidence shows that Paquette observed appellant commit a traffic offense and that Paquette then radioed that information to the Odessa police officers and instructed them to stop appellant's vehicle. The record evidence also shows that Paquette remained in continuous radio contact with the Odessa police officers, and that he arrived at the scene of the arrest just a few minutes after appellant's vehicle was stopped. Given those facts, the trial court could have reasonably concluded that Paquette's participation in and awareness of the circumstances of appellant's arrest made him just as much a participant in the arrest as if he had seized appellant himself. In light of such an Astran analysis, the geographic jurisdiction of the Odessa police officers was irrelevant.

The trial court's ruling denying appellant's motion to suppress was supported by the record and was correct under a theory of law applicable to the case. Therefore, the court of appeals was obligated to uphold the trial court's ruling and erred in failing to do so.

We reverse the judgment of the court of appeals and affirm the judgment of the trial court.

DELIVERED DECEMBER 10, 2003

PUBLISH

WOMACK, J., filed a concurring opinion.

While I join the Court's opinion, I wish to point out a more significant question on which we granted review, but which the Court's opinion does not reach: the authority of municipal police officers to arrest outside their cities.

This court confronted the question in 1987 in Angel v. State.[1] Police officers of the City of Tomball stopped Angel outside the city limits on August 29, 1983. They learned that warrants for his arrest were outstanding, and one of them saw evidence that made him think that Angel's vehicle had been "hot wired," so they arrested him. At his trial for felony theft, he objected to the evidence on the ground that it was illegally seized by officers who had no authority to stop or arrest him "outside the jurisdiction of authority."[2] The trial court overruled the objection. The court of appeals rejected his argument and affirmed the judgment of conviction.

---

[1] 740 S.W.2d 727 (Tex. Cr. App. 1987).

In this court an opinion by Judge Campbell announced the judgment that affirmed the judgments of the courts below. After setting out the facts and the procedural history in Parts I and II, the opinion addressed two questions. In Part III, the opinion held that the State had "waived" the right to challenge Angel's standing to complain of the seizures by not raising the question in the court of appeals.[3] That part of the opinion was joined by only one other judge,[4] with a third judge concurring in the result.[5]

In Part IV, Judge Campbell's opinion addressed the authority of the Tomball officers to arrest outside the city limits. The opinion looked to Articles 998 and 999 of Vernon's Texas Civil Statutes Annotated. Article 998 said

---

[2] Id., at 728-29.

[3] Id., at 730.

[4] See id., at 736 ("DUNCAN, J., joins in part III . . .").

[5] See id., at 748 (dissenting opinion of Miller, J.) ("I concur in the result reached as to the standing issue . . .").

that the city or town council in any city or town "incorporated under the provisions of this title" (not otherwise identified in the opinion) may provide for the appointment of police officers, who "shall have like powers, rights, authority and jurisdiction as are by said title vested in city marshals."[6] In turn, Article 999 said of the city marshal, "In the prevention and suppression of crime and arrest of offenders, he shall have, possess and execute like power, authority and jurisdiction as the sheriff."[7] The opinion noted that a sheriff was "a conservator of the peace in his county. . . . Art. 2.17, V.A.C.C.P. (1977). A sheriff's jurisdiction, therefore, is county-wide. Because a city police officer's jurisdiction for arresting offenders parallels a sheriff's jurisdiction, see Arts. 998 & 999, supra, it appears that a city police officer's jurisdiction is county-wide."[8] The opinion held that those articles "grant city marshals and city police officers county-wide jurisdiction to arrest offenders."[9] It also said that prior decisions of the court, which were to the contrary, were overruled.[10]

I do not believe that Angel can be relied on to decide the question of the authority of police officers to arrest outside their cities today. For one thing, Judge Campbell's opinion on that question was not joined by any other member of the court. One judge was recorded simply as "concurs in result."[11] The other three members of the court

---

[6] Id., at 732, n.13 (emphasis in original).

[7] Ibid. (emphasis in original).

[8] Id., at 735 (emphasis in original).

[9] Id., at 736.

[10] Ibid.

[11] See Angel, 740 S.W.2d, at 736 ("WHITE, J., concurs in result").

who joined the judgment of affirmance dissented from Part III of Judge Campbell's opinion, and said, "Otherwise, [they] concur in the result."[12] Four judges dissented.[13]

Plurality opinions from this court were common before 1997,[14] and the lead opinions did not inform the reader whether they were opinions of the court. In fact, the reader might have to leaf through several opinions, looking for the various places in which the individual judges' decisions might be recorded. Readers and publishers might notice that a lead opinion was not an opinion of the court, but they might not. In the Angel case, for example, the syllabus and headnotes of the West Publishing Company's report did not mention that the lead opinion was that of Judge Campbell with one judge concurring as to Part III, and four judges concurring in the result as to Part IV.[15]

As we have said before, plurality opinions have limited (or even no) precedential value.[16] When an opinion that announced the judgment of the court was not joined [12] Angel, 740 S.W.2d 736, 739 (concurring and dissenting opinion of McCormick, J., joined by Onion, P.J., and Davis, J.).

---

[13] See Angel, 740 S.W.2d, at 736 ("TEAGUE, J., dissents. DUNCAN, J., joins in part III and dissents to part IV"), 739 (dissenting opinion of Clinton, J., joined by Teague, J.), 748 (opinion of Miller, J., concurring in result reached concerning the standing issue, and dissenting to the jurisdiction holding).

[14] Of the cases in which this court ordered its opinions published in State Fiscal Year 1996, nineteen per cent were decided without an opinion of the court. Since 1997 the number has been less than one per cent.

[15] See Angel, 740 S.W.2d, at 727.

[16] E.g., Cooper v. State, 67 S.W.3d 221, 224 (Tex. Cr. App. 2002).

by any other member of the court, we have been free to reexamine its reasoning and to say whether it can be regarded as correct.[17] We granted review to do so in this case.[18] I think that Judge Campbell's opinion did not address the statutes correctly, and the amendment of the controlling statutes in 1995 has made its persuasive authority even less.

Judge Campbell based his opinion in Angel on language in two articles of the civil statutes. The basic flaw in this approach is that, as a dissenting opinion pointed out, it did not take into account whether those statutes applied to the kind of municipality in question.[19]

There are three species of municipal corporations in Texas, categorized according to the manner of their creation: general-law cities (of which there are three types – A, B, and C), home-rule cities, and cities chartered by special legislation.[20] The various statutes that [17] See Ex parte Anderer, 61 S.W.3d 398, 402-05 (Tex. Cr. App. 2001).

---

[18] "The continued viability of Angel is squarely presented in Armendariz v. State, 02-0070, which is currently pending in this Court." Yeager v. State, 104 S.W.3d, 105 n.2 (Tex. Cr. App. 2003).

[19] See Angel, 740 S.W.2d, at 739 (Clinton, J., dissenting).

[20] DAVID B. BROOKS, 22 TEXAS PRACTICE – MUNICIPAL LAW & PRACTICE § 3.03 (2d ed.1999). See TEX. LOCAL GOV'T CODE, ch. 5:

"Subchapter A. Types of Municipalities

"Section

"5.001. Type A General-Law Municipality.

"5.002. Type B General-Law Municipality.

"5.003. Type B General-Law Municipality.

"5.004. Home-Rule Municipality.

"5.005. Special-Law Municipality."

grant their authorities were codified in the Local Government Code in 1987.[21]

When the Tomball officers arrested Angel in 1983, Articles 998 and 999 of Vernon's Civil Statutes (the specific statutes on which Judge Campbell's opinion in Angel relied) were in Title 28, Chapter 1 of the Civil Statutes. The "Articles of this chapter have application only to general law cities."[22] Articles 998 and 999 did not apply to home-rule or special-law municipalities.

Home-rule cities were authorized, by an article in Chapter 13, "To provide for police and fire departments."[23]

> Home-rule cities have the mere statutory authority to "provide for a police department."[24] Whatever extraterritorial authority that may be granted to [home-rule-city] officers pursuant to a [home-rule-city] charter cannot, of course, be in conflict with the general laws of the state which conclude that a [home-rule-city] policeman, as a peace officer, has the duty "to preserve the peace within his jurisdiction."[25] There has never been a statute comparable to that applicable to a Type A

---

[21] Act of May 21, 1987, 70th Leg., R.S., ch. 149, § 1, 1987 Tex. Gen. Laws 707, 707.

[22] Trueman O'Quinn, History, Status, and Function of Cities, Towns and Villages, in 2A VERNON'S ANNOTATED REVISED CIVIL STATUTES OF THE STATE OF TEXAS XIII, XXIX (1963).

[23] VERNON'S ANNOTATED CIVIL STATUTES art. 1175(27) (1963).

[24] [TEX. LOCAL GOV'T CODE] § 341.003.

[25] [TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art.] 2.13.

> general-law municipalities that gives officers the same county wide authority as sheriffs.[26]

It may be added that a home-rule municipality also may police certain areas owned by and located outside the municipality.[27] In a Type B general-law municipality, the marshal has the same power within the municipality that a constable has within a precinct.[28] In a Type C municipality, the governing body may appoint police officers that it considers necessary and may define the duties of the officers.[29]

Insofar as Judge Campbell's opinion said that Articles 998 and 999 could authorize officers of any kind of municipality to arrest outside the limits of their cities, it was simply incorrect. Some courts of appeals have recognized that the holding of his opinion cannot be applied to officers of all types of cities.[30]

A second reason why Angel cannot be authoritative today is that Articles 998 and 999 have changed. They were repealed, effective September 1, 1987,[31] and replaced

---

[26] DAVID B. BROOKS, 23 TEXAS PRACTICE – MUNICIPAL LAW & PRACTICE § 14.09 (2d ed. 1999) (footnotes in original, renumbered).

[27] TEX. LOCAL GOV'T CODE § 341.903 ("parks and grounds, lakes and land contiguous . . ., speedways and boulevards").

[28] Id., § 341.022(a).

[29] Id., § 341.002.

[30] See Yeager v. State, 23 S.W.3d 566, 570 n.3 (Tex. Cr. App. – Waco 2000), reversed on other grounds, 104 S.W.3d 103 (Tex. Cr. App. 2003); Reichaert v. State, 830 S.W.2d 348 (Tex. App. – San Antonio 1992, pet. ref'd).

[31] Id., § 49(1), 1987 Tex. Gen. Laws at 1306 ("The following laws are repealed: (1) the following articles and acts, as compiled in Vernon's Texas Civil Statutes: . . . 998 . . . 999 . . .").

by sections 341.001 and 341.021 of the Local Government Code. Those sections apply only to the police force and the marshal, respectively, of a Type A general-law municipality.[32] In 1995, those sections were amended to give the officers of those cities the same powers and jurisdiction that the Code of Criminal Procedure gives peace officers. The amending act said:

> Section 341.001(e), Local Government Code, is amended to read as follows:
>
> (e) A police officer has:
>
> (1) the powers, rights, duties, and jurisdiction granted to or imposed on a peace officer by the Code of Criminal Procedure [~~of a marshal of a Type A general-law municipality~~]; and
>
> (2) other powers and duties prescribed by the governing body.[33]
>
> Section 341.021(e), Local Government Code, is amended to read as follows:
>
> (e) The marshal has the same power and jurisdiction as a peace officer under the Code of Criminal Procedure [~~the county sheriff~~] to execute warrants, to prevent and suppress crime, and to arrest offenders. The marshal has other powers, not inconsistent with state law, that the governing body confers by ordinance.[34]

---

[32] BROOKS, supra note 26, § 14.09.

[33] Act of June 16, 1995, 74th Leg., R.S., ch. 829, § 2, 1995 Tex. Gen. Laws 4213, 4214.

[34] Id., § 3, 1995 Tex. Gen. Laws 4213, 4214.

The act had one other section, which added subsection (g) to article 14.03 of the Code of Criminal Procedure:

> (g) A peace officer who is listed in Subdivision (1), (2), (3), or (4), Article 2.12, is licensed under Chapter 415, Government Code, and is outside of the officer's jurisdiction may arrest without a warrant a person who commits any offense within the officer's presence or view, except that an officer who is outside the officer's jurisdiction may arrest a person for a violation of the Uniform Act Regulating Traffic on Highways (Article 67091d, Vernon's Texas Civil Statutes) only if the officer is listed in Subdivision (4), Article 2.12. A peace officer making an arrest under this subsection shall as soon as practicable after making the arrest notify a law enforcement agency having jurisdiction where the arrest was made. The law enforcement agency shall then take custody of the person committing the offense and take the person before a magistrate in compliance with Article 14.06.[35]

The peace officers who were listed in Article 2.12(1)-(4) were sheriffs and their deputies, constables and deputy constables, marshals or police officers of an incorporated city or town or village, and rangers and officers of the Department of Public Safety. Subsection (g) was amended in 1999 to add a fifth class of officers (the investigators of the district attorneys', criminal district attorneys', and county attorneys' offices) and to change the reference from

---

[35] Id., § 1, 1995 Tex. Gen. Laws 4213, 4213.

"Uniform Act [etc.]" to "Subtitle C, Title 7, Transportation Code."[36] Other, minor amendments have been made.

Taken as a whole, the 1995 act (as amended in 1999) affected the law in four ways. (1) It gave five classes of peace officers authority to arrest outside their jurisdictions for offenses, other than certain traffic offenses, that were committed within the officer's presence or view. (2) By negative implication, it denied to all other classes of peace officers authority to arrest outside their jurisdictions for offenses that were committed within the officer's presence or view. (3) It gave only rangers and officers of the Department of Public Safety authority to arrest for certain traffic offenses if they were outside the officer's jurisdiction. (4) It gave the officers of Class A general-law municipalities the same power and authority as peace officers are generally given under the Code of Criminal Procedure.

When this statute, as it has been amended, is considered together with the provisions of the Local Government Code, today's answer to the question in Angel, and the question in this appeal of which we granted review but that we have not addressed, would seem to be that a peace officer does not have authority to arrest outside the officer's jurisdiction unless (1) the offense is committed within the officer's presence or view, and (2) the offense is under some statute other than Transportation Code Title 7, Chapter C, and (3) the officer is licensed under Government Code Chapter 415, and (4) the officer is:

---

[36] Act of May 24, 1999, 76th Leg., R.S., ch. 210, § 2, 1999 Tex. Gen. Laws 686, 686-87.

(a) a sheriff, or a sheriff's deputy, or a reserve deputy with a certain licence;

(b) a constable, or a deputy constable, or a reserve deputy with a certain license;

(c) a marshal or police officer of an incorporated city, town, or village, or a reserve officer with a certain license, and the municipality is:

(1) a Type A general-law city,

(2) a Type B general-law city,

(3) a Type C general law city (unless the governing body has defined the officer's duty so as not to include that authority),

(4) a home-rule city, or

(5) a special-law city (unless the statute that created the city, the charter, or the governing body acting under that statute and charter, has defined the officer's duty so as not to include that authority);

(d) a ranger or officer of the Department of Public Safety; or

(e) an investigator of the office of a county attorney, a district attorney, or a criminal district attorney.

A ranger or officer of the Department of Public Safety has the additional authority to arrest outside the officer's jurisdiction for an offense under Transportation Code Title 7, Chapter C, if the offense is committed in the officer's presence or view.

Some courts of appeals have recognized that the 1995 amendments have made obsolete the holding in Judge Campbell's opinion in Angel.[37]

Of course, the proper consideration of the statutes does not end the analysis in every case. For example, our decisions have recognized a doctrine of "hot pursuit" that allows an officer who begins to pursue a suspect within the boundary of a municipality to continue the pursuit and effect an arrest outside the boundary.[38]

The Court has not reached this issue in this case because it disposed of the appeal by holding that the arrest was made, in effect, by a deputy sheriff who had county-wide authority, and that the trial court did not err in admitting the evidence that was obtained from the arrest. I join the Court's opinion.

En banc.
Delivered December 10, 2003.
Publish.

---

[37] See Gerron v. State, 57 S.W.3d 568, 570 (Tex. App. – Waco 2001), vacated on other grounds, 97 S.W.3d 597 (Tex. Cr. App. 2003); Hoitt v. State, 28 S.W.3d 162, 165 (Tex. App. – Texarkana 2000), pet. dism'd); Preston v. State, 983 S.W.2d 24, 26 (Tex. App. – Tyler 1998). Contra, Brother v. State, 85 S.W.3d 377, 385 n.7 (Tex. App. – Fort Worth 2002).

[38] See, e.g., Yeager v. State, 104 S.W.3d 103 (Tex. Cr. App. 2003).

Meyers, J., filed a dissenting opinion, in which Johnson, J., joined.

DISSENTING OPINION

I disagree with the majority's failure to address the issue of whether home rule police officers have county-wide jurisdiction. At trial and on appeal, the State argued only that probable cause existed because of the informant's tip and because of Deputy Paquette's involvement in the arrest, but did not argue that the police officers in this case were within their jurisdiction when they stopped appellant. Only on petition for discretionary review by this Court does the State Prosecuting Attorney contend that the Odessa city police officers, as municipal officers, had county-wide jurisdiction under our decision in Angel v. State, 740 S.W.2d 727 (Tex. Crim. App. 1987). The majority neglects this ground for review.

In Angel, this Court considered whether municipal police officers acting outside the city limits may arrest someone for a traffic violation without a warrant. Angel, 740 S.W.2d 727. We examined the question under Article 14.01 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and former Article 6701(d) of the Uniform Act Regulating Traffic on Highways[1] (now TEX. TRANSP. CODE

---

[1] Article 6701(d) of the Uniform Act Regulating Traffic on Highways read as follows:

> "Any peace officer is authorized to arrest without warrant any person found committing a violation of any provision of [the Uniform Act]."

§ 543.001).[2] We noted that although the two statutes together seemed to grant peace officers unlimited geographic jurisdiction for making warrantless arrests for offenses committed in their presence or view, "the authority to act may not necessarily define the geographic scope of that authority. That geographic scope, if absent from the statute granting authority to act, must find its source in some other statute . . . or be controlled by common law." Angel, 740 S.W.2d at 732, citing Preston v. State, 700 S.W.2d 227, 229 (Tex. Crim. App. 1985). We then looked to Articles 998 and 999 of the Local Government Code, which at the time were the sections governing the appointment of city police officers. Angel, 740 S.W.2d at 732-33. Those articles granted city police officers the same authority and jurisdiction as city marshals, which is county-wide. Id., citing TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. ANN. art. 998, 999. We therefore concluded that city police officers have county-wide jurisdiction to arrest offenders. Angel, 740 S.W.2d at 736.

If our examination of applicable case law were to end there, the State would be correct in asserting that the Odessa city police officers were within their jurisdiction when they stopped appellant for the traffic offense. However, Articles 998 and 999 of the Local Government Code were repealed in 1987, and recodified, in part, as section 341.001 of the current Local Government Code.[3] That

---

[2] Section 543.001 now reads:

"Any peace officer may arrest without warrant a person found committing a violation of this subtitle."

[3] See TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. ANN. art. 998, 999 (Vernon 1963), repealed by Act of May 21, 1987, 70th Leg., ch. 149, § 49(1), 1987 Tex. Gen. Laws 1308.

section is applicable only to Type A general-law municipalities. See TEX. LOC. GOV'T CODE, § 341.001.

In 1995, chapter 341 of the Local Government Code was amended, and the section defining the powers of police officers from Type A municipalities was changed. The section now grants those officers the same "powers, rights, duties, and jurisdiction granted to or imposed on a peace officer by the Code of Criminal Procedure." TEX. LOC. GOV'T CODE, § 341.001(e)(1). However, the geographic jurisdictional limits for peace officers are not defined in the Code of Criminal Procedure, nor in any other statute.

When this Court held that city police officers have county-wide jurisdiction, that holding was based on Local Government Code sections which are now applicable, if at all, only to Type A municipalities. In fact, the language relied on in Angel has been eliminated even from the code section applying to Type A municipal police officers.

Subsequent Court of Appeals decisions have limited the application of Angel's holding to city police officers employed by certain types of municipalities. See Yeager, 23 S.W.3d 566, 570 n.3 (Tex. App. – Waco 2000) (Angel does not apply to officers employed by a Class B municipality); Reichaert, 830 S.W.2d 348, 351 (Tex. App. – San Antonio 1992, pet. ref'd) (Angel does not apply to officers employed by a Class C municipality). No court has directly addressed the question of whether Angel applies to officers employed by home rule municipalities. Because this was the State Prosecuting Attorney's first ground for review, I disagree with the majority's failure to address this issue and offer my own analysis.

In 2001, the United States District Court in Dallas was called upon to consider the recently changed and somewhat confusing law in this area. United States v. Coleman, 162 F. Supp. 2d 582, 584-86 (N.D. Tex. 2001). The District Court concluded that the geographic jurisdiction of city police officers after the 1995 amendments no longer depends on the type of municipality employing them, but on the officer's classification under Article 2.12 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.[4] Id. at 585. Municipal police officers are not authorized under Articles 2.12 and 14.03(g)[5] to make arrests outside their jurisdiction for traffic violations. Id. The Coleman court noted that there is no other statute defining the geographic scope of city police officers. Looking to the common law, as suggested by Angel, the court concluded that city officers' authority ends at the city limits.[6] Coleman, 162 F.Supp.2d at 585.

Home rule municipalities differ from Type A, B, and C general-law municipalities in that they "look to acts of the legislature not for grants of power, but only for limitations on their powers." MJR's Fare of Dallas, Inc. 792 S.W.2d at 572. However, the geographic scope of home-rule municipality police officers' jurisdictional authority cannot be limitless.

---

[4] Municipal police officers are classified as peace officers under Article 2.12(3).

[5] Article 14.03(g) states that only officers listed in Article 2.12(4), "rangers and officers commissioned by the Public Safety Commission and the Director of the Department of Public Safety" may make arrests for traffic violations when outside their own jurisdiction.

[6] The Coleman court did note that this general rule is subject to a "hot pursuit" exception. Coleman, 162 F.Supp.2d at 858, n.2. See also Yeager v. State, 104 S.W.3d 103 (Tex. Crim. App. 2003).

In Arlington v. Lillard, 116 Tex. 446, 294 S.W. 829 (1927), the Texas Supreme Court held that the City of Arlington, a home rule municipality, could not prohibit the use of certain streets by buses and other vehicles for hire. Those streets, although within the city limits of Arlington, were part of the state highway system. The court held that Arlington did not have the power to interfere with the use of the state highway beyond the city limits by prohibiting use of those streets, and that the effect of the ordinance purporting to do so was extraterritorial. Id. at 451-52. The court quoted an early constitutional commentator:

> The powers conferred upon municipalities must be construed with reference to the object of their creation, namely, as agencies of the State in local government. The State can create them for no other purpose, and it can confer powers of government to no other end, without at once coming in conflict with . . . maxims designed to confine all the agencies of government to the exercise of their proper functions. And wherever the municipality shall attempt to exercise powers not within the proper province of local self-government, whether the right to do so be claimed under express legislative grant or by implication from the charter, the act must be considered as altogether ultra vires, and therefore void.

Id. at 451, quoting Thomas M. Cooley, A Treatise on the Constitutional Limitations Which Rest Upon the Legislative Power of the States of the American Union 309 (7th ed.). This passage, although quoted in reference to the power of a home-rule municipality to legislate, is equally applicable to the situation here. A municipality simply does not have the power to extend the territorial jurisdiction of its employees beyond the geographic limits of the municipality.

Although the statutory basis for the Angel holding has been significantly changed (as discussed above), this Court's reasoning in the case is still sound. Because the geographic scope of home rule police officers' jurisdiction is not defined by statute, it must be controlled by common law. Angel, 740 S.W.2d at 732, citing Preston v. State, 700 S.W.2d 227, 229 (Tex. Crim. App. 1985). At common law, municipal police officers had jurisdictional authority only within the city limits. Therefore, the Court of Appeals was correct in holding that the Odessa city police officers did not have jurisdiction to make a warrantless search or arrest outside the city limits of Odessa. Nothing in Article 14.03 of the Code of Criminal Procedure would give the officers authority to make such an arrest outside their own municipality.

Moreover, the Court of Appeals correctly held that the officers could not arrest appellant for a traffic violation that occurred outside their jurisdiction and that they did not witness, based on a "collective knowledge" theory of probable cause. Deputy Paquette had jurisdictional authority and probable cause to believe that a traffic violation had been committed. However, the fact that Deputy Paquette was peripherally involved in the Odessa police's investigation of alleged drug possession was not enough to bestow authority on the Odessa police to stop appellant for the traffic violation and search his vehicle. The fact is that appellant was stopped, searched, and arrested by Odessa police officers although no crime at all ever occurred within the city limits of Odessa.

Because the majority fails to address the ground for review brought by the State Prosecuting Attorney and instead resolves this case based on Deputy Paquette's limited connection to the arrest, I respectfully dissent.

Filed: December 10, 2003

Publish

APPENDIX B

[SEAL]

COURT OF APPEALS
EIGHTH DISTRICT OF TEXAS
EL PASO, TEXAS

JOSE FRANCO ARMENDARIZ, Appellant, v. THE STATE OF TEXAS, Appellee.	)	No. 08-00-00457-CR Appeal from 358th District Court of Ector County, Texas (TC# D-27,751)

OPINION

Jose Franco Armendariz appeals the trial court's decision to deny suppression of cocaine that was seized in the course of his stop, search, and arrest. We reverse and remand.

Facts

On June 10, 1999, the Odessa City Police Department received an anonymous tip that Armendariz would be in possession of cocaine and heading to a location outside the Odessa city limits at the intersection of FM 1936 and West 42nd Street in Ector County.[1] The informant also told the officers that Armendariz would be in one of three vehicles, one of which was a green Lincoln, and the location of Armendariz's trailer.

[1] While the Odessa city police had been given Armendariz's name, they had no physical description of him beyond the fact that he was a Hispanic male.

In response to the tip, Odessa City Police Officer Jordan Medrano marshaled his staff and requested the help of Ector County Deputy Sheriff Keith Paquette in locating Armendariz's trailer. Paquette accompanied the Odessa city police to an area outside the Odessa city limits and helped Medrano locate Armendariz's trailer. Medrano then set up surveillance.

Medrano saw Armendariz get into a green Lincoln which matched the informant's information and drive away from the trailer. He radioed Paquette who then observed the Lincoln pass a vehicle on the right shoulder of the road while traveling northbound on FM 1936. Paquette radioed this information to Odessa City Police Officer Robert Doporto ("Doporto"). Doporto and Odessa City Police Officer Chris Aguilar ("Aguilar") then executed a police stop and search of the Lincoln, and ultimately Armendariz's arrest.

It is undisputed that the stop and search of the Lincoln, and Armendariz's arrest took place outside the Odessa city limits, and that Deputy Paquette was the only law enforcement agent to see the alleged traffic violation that led to the stop. It is undisputed that prior to the stop of the Lincoln and the discovery of the cocaine in the door side pocket of the vehicle, no one other than Paquette saw Armendariz commit any violations of the law. It is undisputed that Paquette was not involved in the stop, search, or arrest. In fact, by the time Paquette arrived at the scene of the stop, Armendariz's vehicle had already been searched, cocaine discovered in the vehicle, and Armendariz placed under arrest. Paquette testified that he could not make the stop himself because he was in an unmarked, undercover police vehicle.

Aguilar was present from the inception of the stop, search, and arrest till its completion. At the suppression hearing, Aguilar testified he heard Armendariz consent to the search of the Lincoln in Spanish although the videotape of the stop does not reflect that oral consent. Aguilar later testified at trial that Armendariz gave his consent solely by nodding his head and that Aguilar was not close enough to hear Armendariz say anything. The videotape does however show that Aguilar was within hearing distance at the point at which Armendariz could have given verbal consent to a search.

Aguilar further testified that Armendariz gave his consent to Doporto. At the suppression hearing, Doporto testified that he could not hear Armendariz giving consent to search but that Armendariz had nodded his consent. At trial he testified that Armendariz nodded his head "yes" and said, "Yes, I consent to the search." Doporto also maintained at trial that he could hear Armendariz consenting to the search on the videotape even though he admitted he was changing his testimony from that given at the suppression hearing.

Armendariz testified he did not consent to the search of the Lincoln. The defense also offered the testimony of the court-appointed interpreter who listened to the tape at least ten times in an attempt to determine whether oral consent was given. She testified she could not hear the officers ask Armendariz for permission to search the

Lincoln, or hear Armendariz give consent to such a search.[2]

Odessa City Police Officer Lt. Vic Sikes testified he conducted and controlled the entire Armendariz investigation, stop, and arrest on behalf of the Odessa city police. There were no supervisors from the County Sheriff's Office present. It was undisputed that Armendariz was not turned over to the Ector County Sheriff's Department following his arrest. Odessa city police were also responsible for booking Armendariz at the Ector County detention center.[3]

The trial court denied Armendariz's motion to suppress and held that the Odessa city police did have probable cause to stop, search, and arrest Armendariz because Deputy Paquette was in the area. The case was then tried to the bench, and Armendariz was found guilty of intentionally and knowingly possessing a controlled substance, cocaine, in an amount more than four but less than two hundred grams.

Standard of Review

With regard to motions to suppress, we review the trial court's findings of fact under an abuse of discretion

---

[2] The Court has watched the videotape of the stop, search, and arrest and agrees that if Armendariz did consent to the search of the Lincoln, it is not recorded on the videotape.

[3] How much time actually elapsed from the time of the stop till the time of booking is not clear. What is clear is that the Odessa city police kept Armendariz in their custody through a search of his residence before he was transported to the Ector County detention center.

standard and will not disturb those findings as long as they have support in the record. Whitten v. State, 828 S.W.2d 817, 820 (Tex. App.–Houston [1st Dist.] 1992, pet. ref'd); Romero v. State, 800 S.W.2d 539, 543 (Tex. Crim. App. 1990). In contrast, the trial court's conclusions of law and the application of those principles to the facts of the case are reviewed de novo. State v. Ross, 32 S.W.3d 853, 856 (Tex. Crim. App. 2000).

Applicable Substantive Law

Texas law does not authorize a peace officer to make warrantless arrests anywhere within the State. McCain v. State, 995 S.W.2d 229, 234 (Tex. App.–Houston [14th Dist.] 1999, pet. ref'd); Angel v. State, 740 S.W.2d 727, 732 (Tex. Crim. App. 1987). Instead, it limits a peace officer outside his jurisdiction to arrest without a warrant when a person "commits an offense within the officer's presence or view, if the offense is a felony, . . . or a breach of the peace . . . ." TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 14.03(d) (Vernon Supp. 2002) ("the Code"); see Thomas v. State, 864 S.W.2d 193, 196 (Tex. App.–Texarkana 1993, pet. ref'd). The Code also specifically prohibits peace officers, other than those commissioned by the Public Safety Commission and the Director of the Department of Public Safety, to arrest outside of their jurisdiction for violations of the Transportation Code. TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 14.03(g) (Vernon Supp. 2002). Passing on the right can be a violation of the Transportation Code. See TEX. TRANSP. CODE ANN. §§ 545.057 and 545.058 (Vernon 1999).[4]

---

[4] Both Doporto and Medrano testified Armendariz was stopped solely because of Paquette's radio report that Armendariz had passed a

(Continued on following page)

Applying these basic legal principles to the undisputed facts of this case leads inevitably to a single conclusion – neither Doporto nor Aguilar were authorized under Texas law to stop Armendariz. First, they were outside their jurisdiction and therefore without authority to stop Armendariz, and second, they lacked the specific authority to act on Paquette's report of a traffic violation arrest. See McCain, 995 S.W.2d at 234-35; Dominguez v. State, 924 S.W.2d 950, 956 (Tex. App.–El Paso 1996, no pet.); TEX. TRANSP. CODE ANN. §§ 545.057 and 545.058 (Vernon 1999).

Nevertheless, the trial court found that probable cause existed for the stop based on the information given to the Odessa city police from the confidential informant. Under some circumstances, a police officer may lawfully stop a person based on information furnished by a third party. See Florida v. J.L., 529 U.S. 266, 272, 120 S.Ct. 1375, 146 L.Ed.2d 254 (2000). On this issue, the word "lawfully" is dispositive. Stated another way, the Odessa city police that stopped, searched, and arrested Armendariz were, by definition, acting "unlawfully" because they did not have the authority to so act. On this basis alone, the trial court erred in finding probable cause existed for the search.

Even if we were to assume that the Odessa city police did have jurisdictional authority, the trial court's legal conclusion that there was probable cause because of the confidential information still fails to pass constitutional muster. A peace officer may stop a person if he forms a reasonable suspicion that "some activity out of the ordinary is occurring or had occurred, some suggestion to connect the detained person with the unusual activity, and some indication that the activity is related to a crime." Johnson v. State, 658 S.W.2d 623, 626 (Tex. Crim. App. 1983). In this instance, the State concedes that the undisputed testimony of every Odessa city police officer was that the stop was made because of Paquette's radio report concerning an alleged traffic violation, not because of the informant's information. It was also undisputed that none of the Odessa city police observed Armendariz committing any activity out of the ordinary that would have led them to conclude that criminal activity had or was about to take place.

---

motorist on the right hand shoulder in violation of the Transportation Code.

In support of the trial court's legal conclusion that probable cause existed because of the informant's tip, the State relies on a Fifth Circuit decision which stands for the proposition that the totality of the circumstances must be considered in determining whether a stop is legal. See U.S. v. Wright, 588 F.2d 189, 192 (5th Cir. 1979). While we agree that is a correct statement of the law, the Wright case does not apply to these circumstances and is factually distinguishable from the instant. More relevant to this case is the well-established legal principle that although an accurate description of a subject's readily observable location and appearance will help the police correctly identify the person whom the tipster means to accuse, it does not show that the tipster has knowledge of the concealed criminal activity. J.L., 529 U.S. at 272; Dowler v. State, 44 S.W.3d 666, 670 (Tex. App.–Austin 2001, pet. ref'd). The corroboration of details that are easily obtainable at the time the information is provided and which do not indicate criminal activity therefore will not lend support to the tip. Davis v. State, 989 S.W.3d 859, 864 (Tex. App.–Austin 1999, pet. ref'd). The critical part of this analysis is that a meaningful corroboration between the nature of the tip given and the reason for the stop must exist. Dowler, 44 S.W.3d at 670-71. No such connection can be demonstrated in this case. The articulated reason for this stop – that Armendariz committed a traffic violation – bears no relation to the nature of the tipster's information, that Armendariz would have illegal drugs in his possession.

The State also contends that Paquette's presence cloaked the Odessa city police with authority to arrest. However, on their face the relevant statutory provisions, and well-established law, require that the arresting officers outside their jurisdiction physically witness the acts that give rise to a reasonable suspicion for the stop. See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. arts. 14.01 and 14.03(d) (Vernon 1977 & Supp. 2002); Minnesota v. Dickerson, 508 U.S. 366, 373, 113 S.Ct. 2130, 2135, 124 L.Ed.2d 334 (1993) (quoting Terry, 392 U.S. at 30).

Even if Paquette's view of the traffic violation could be imputed as personal knowledge of Doporto and Aguilar, however, the Odessa city police who ultimately searched and arrested Armendariz further violated the requirements of the Code by failing to notify the law enforcement agency that had jurisdiction over Ector County as soon as was practicable after his arrest to ensure those authorities took him into custody. See TEX.CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 14.03(d) (Vernon Supp. 2002); Yeager v. State, 23 S.W.3d 566, 571 (Tex. App.–Waco 2000, pet. filed).

The trial court also found that because the search was "consensual" any taint from the stop did not extend to the arrest which occurred after the discovery of the cocaine in the Lincoln expanded the officers' reasonable suspicion into probable cause. This Court has previously held that when no authority for the stop exists in the first place, the consent to search does not attenuate the taint and any evidence seized in the course of such search must be excluded as fruit of the poisonous tree. Dominguez, 924 S.W.2d at 956. Therefore, the trial court's decision to deny suppression was erroneous as a matter of law and must be reversed.

Lastly, the trial court apparently adopted the State's argument that the stop was made pursuant to a "multi agency investigation[s] . . . at the behest of a civilian clothed undercover Sheriff's Deputy." The record reveals otherwise. Odessa City Police Officer Sikes testified he was in complete control of the operation from start to finish. He also testified that the sole purpose of the operation was to "stop, make a stop on the vehicle." The intent of the Odessa city police to stop Armendariz for any reason thus existed even before they called Paquette to help them locate Armendariz's trailer. In short, the stop was made at the behest of the Odessa city police, not the Ector County Sheriff as the State implies. Finally, the record does not contain legally dispositive proof that this investigation, stop, search, or arrest was made pursuant to an official multi-agency agreement. See Dominguez, 924 S.W.2d at 956-57 (opinion on rehearing).

Conclusion

For these reasons, we conclude that Doporto's and Aguilar's initial stop of Armendariz's vehicle was unlawful and that, as the fruit of the poisoned tree, the cocaine seized in the search and arrest that followed should have been suppressed as evidence by the trial court. See Dominguez, 924 S.W.2d at 956. Because Armendariz entered a not guilty plea and because the cocaine was the only evidence to support the State's case, the introduction of that evidence created harmful error. See TEX. R. APP. P. 44.2; Villalobos v. State, 999 S.W.2d 132, 136-37 (Tex. App.–El Paso 1999, no pet.). Armendariz's conviction is therefore reversed and this case remanded to the trial court for proceedings consistent with this opinion.

/s/ Susan Larsen
SUSAN LARSEN,
Justice

December 6, 2001
Before Panel No. 3
Barajas C.J., Larsen, and Chew, JJ.

(Publish)

APPENDIX C

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

1. Fourth Amendment states as follows:

> The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

2. TEX.CODECRIM.PROC.ANN.Art. 14.03(d) states as follows:

> A peace officer who is outside his jurisdiction may arrest, without warrant, a person who commits an offense within the officer's presence or view, if the offense is a felony, a violation of Title 9, Chapter 42, Penal Code a breach of peace, or an offense under Section 49.02, Penal Code. A peace officer making an arrest under this subsection shall, as soon as practicable after making the arrest, notify a law enforcement agency having jurisdiction where the arrest was made. The law enforcement agency shall then take custody of the person committing the offense and take the person before a magistrate in compliance with Article 14.06 of this Code.